

Expanding Developmental Horizons through Education, Research & Innovation: Global Perspective

Senior Colonel & Prof Wang Yong,

National Defence University China

Senior Colonel Wang Yong, Professor, National Defence University, People's Republic of China presented his paper on the Global perspective of the theme. Prof. Yong in his presentation highlighted the development of a comprehensive military education in the national defence university is imperative and its expansion with a holistic approach, including the military strategy, military tactics, and military technology are crucial to tackle the challenges that we face in the contemporary military context. Also, his presentation highlighted the Chinese history of the military education and its unique nature how developed the Chinese military capability and military skills in a global arena. Further, he stressed that the National Defence University (NDU) of China and the General Sir John Kotelawala Defence University (KDU) have similar military education system that is included the modern military studies and the military technology. The presenter's views are noteworthy in terms of developing the military education in the modern military setting to enhance the military capabilities in both countries (Sri Lanka and China).