

ABSTRACT

Sri Lanka Air Force is an organization which has been providing its service to the nation since 1951 with facing many challengers in past and present. Sri Lanka Air Force has evolved to demands of the motherlands needs. Though Sri Lanka Air Force is a technical organization, there are number of troops serve in non-technical fields to assist the smooth function of Sri Lanka Air Force (SLAF).

Administrative Regiment branch had been formed in SLAF to provide ground support to motherland Sri Lanka demands and protection of Air fields and other assets of SLAF. Officers are being inducted to the regiment branch according to the vacancy available at Administrative Regiment branch.

Presently majority of admin regiment officers are much keen to follow non-military courses. For an example Human Resources Course, English Course, Hotel Management Course, LLB, Logistic Management Courses etc. Most of these courses are offered by the SLAF with intention of Career Development of admin regiment officers. It is important to study after following these courses whether admin regiment officers are capable enough to full fill the SLAF inspiration which is benefitted for the SLAF as well as individual officers career development.

This research work is mainly focused to discuss whether Admin Regiment officers are effectively utilized in their working environment and find out reasons why Admin Regiment officers much keen to follow Non-military courses. It is very much important to discuss these matters at present context as Sri Lanka Air Force is taking maximum effort to develop the professional skills of every officers. SLAF is also need to be benefited from professional knowledge through the Non-military courses. If officers not contributing the SLAF well through the professional knowledge which they have gained through the Non-military courses that would be negatively effect to the expected result from those officers. Further this research paper have been discussed the views of Commanding Officers of Regiments Wings SLAF on Non-military courses.
